US Expansion Support

An opportunity to discuss Life Sciences business expansion in Charleston, South Carolina. Megan Anderson, Director of Global Business Development at Charleston Regional Development Alliance (www.crda.org), will be in London, Cambridge and Edinburgh from 3-7 October and is available to meet at your premises. Charleston is a cost-effective location with a burgeoning Life Sciences sector and is home to the renowned Medical University of South Carolina, offering possibilities for partnerships, R&D, clinical trials, product development, manufacturing and distribution. CRDA offers free support, including access to local business networks, incentives and market intelligence, as well as location assistance.

Our Recent BioWednesday

We were delighted to collaborate with Bidwells for our recent BioWednesday event where the topic was "What is shaping the 2030 Life Science future and what is the role of real estate in supporting ecosystems over the coming years?" Discussion covered the continued high value placed on existing ecosystems as well as the challenges facing the life sciences sector due to limited areas for development, especially for laboratory space. The advantages of science parks and their role in supporting collaboration between start ups and larger companies was also a theme. If you missed out on the discussion, you can catch up on demand here...

The next BioWednesday, 5 October 2022 will be in collaboration with Marks & Clerk discussing "How is 5G Enhancing Healthcare Connectivity?" Register...
